Discrimination against women, and people of colour

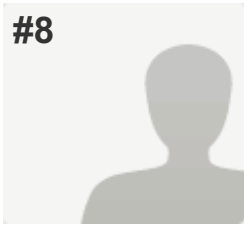

Q9: How should they be addressed?

Until your congress gets its act together nothing much will be done. Legislation re these issues should be strengthened through stricter enforcement at company and government departments and more training of police. I am afraid that with the ingrained biases particularity in the south not much will change over the next decades

 End voting discrimination
 End state and local impediments to voting

Q9: How should they be addressed?

Economic inequality -- Fairer tax system, with the wealthy paying more; better education other than university, such as schooling in the trades and in other areas where workers are needed and the pay is reasonably good; put Americans to work by expanding infrastructure projects and implementing solar, wind and other clean, renewable energy projects.

Right to choose -- Put behind us, once and for all, all the extremist, right-wing, religious efforts to erect barriers to a woman's right to choose. Abortion should be provided free in our country, to anyone, upon demand and without the need for any "reason" or "explanation."

Medical syystem -- While Obamacare is a step in the right direction, overwhelming structural problems remain in our medical system. This could be done in many ways, but the simplest to grasp would be for Medicare to be extended to apply to everyone. We need a single-payer system for everyone. It was not possible to initiate such a system, at the time Obamacare was enacted, because the Republicans would not permit it.

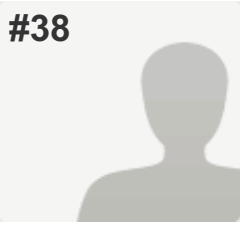

End discrimination -- In voting, re-instate the Voting Right Act, to re-start supervision of state election behavior.

End state and local impediments to voting -- Prohibit right-wing efforts to limit voting.

Q9: How should they be addressed?

Economic inequality -- Tax the rich more; job train in trade schools; subsidize with tax breaks the employment of lower economic individuals

Discrimination -- Keep working at it; monitor closely the actions of historically-discriminatory state and local governments

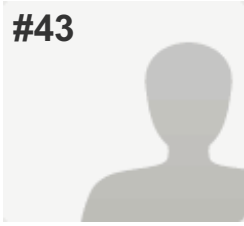

Abortion, birth control, and women's health issues -- Stop state and local governments from initiating and continuing laws that create barriers to abortion, birth control, and other women's health issues. Abortion and birth control should be free for everyone, upon demand, without the need for a "reason" or an "explanation."

Voting rights -- Re-implement the Voting Rights Act to put historically-discriminatory state and local governments back under the prior-approval authority of the Department of Justice. Eliminate all efforts by state and local governments to implement or maintain barriers to voting.

Civil Rights: equal opportunity for all.

Social justice: restrict gun ownership to persons who have passed a "safe ownership" test & eliminate assault weapon ownership.

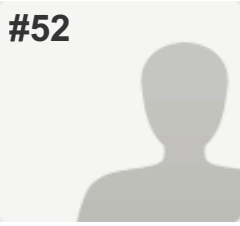

Q9: How should they be addressed?

Civil Rights: we should expand educational opportunity so that a high school diploma equates with the completion of 2 years of college work as in Europe and we should require that schools produce students that meet minimum qualifications. For social justice, we must pass gun control laws.

Volunteer to teach literacy. Become a voter registrar and register people to vote. Especially young people. In 2012 I registered 63 people to vote including a felon who had regained eligibility to vote and two girls who were still 17, but would turn 18 by election day. Some people said a voter registration drive in Ferguson was unseemly. No. A voter registration drive is the appropriate response to all sorts of issues.

There are many. But perhaps an overlooked one is the demotion in power of most individuals relative to moneyed interests. This is a major contributor to the diverging distribution in incomes, options and power in our country.

Q9: How should they be addressed?

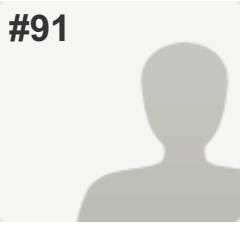

Our governing structure has a missing link. The US constitution set up a representative structure that was supposed to reflect the views of an informed electorate. Unfortunately people do not have time or ability to become informed and to deliberate amongst each other on most issues. Representatives are easily swayed by moneyed forces. What is missing therefore is a means to provide a voice of an informed and deliberated constituency. Today we know a great deal about statistically representative groups which can stand for a larger constituency. We need to set up selectedly representative groups which can be brought together for a weekend to be informed on selected issues and be assisted in deliberating within the group. Polling of the group beforehand represents the voice of the uninformed/undeliberated constituency and polling the group afterward would represent the voice of the informed/deliberated constituency. Representatives of the constituency could then use the (publicized) outcomes to guide their representation. If such a structure were instituted I believe that much of the distorted influence of our current representative process could be corrected and one dollar/one vote could be brought back towards one person/one vote.

Racism still exists; injustice is higher amongst minorities and the poor. Criminal justice system is broken. Immigration policy forces injustice broadly.

Q9: How should they be addressed?

1. We must reform criminal justice from a system of punishment to one of rehabilitation as exists in other Western societies.
2. We must end gerrymandering which which perverts our primary system and prevents national consensus on social justice issues.

Protect the individual against collusive ethnically oriented discrimination and permit an open dialog on racial and ethnic matters while at the same time raising up the disadvantaged and promoting equality.

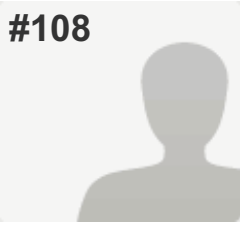

Q9: How should they be addressed?

I think discussion on racial and ethnic matters should be more protected and that individuals should not be legally penalized for moderate discussion or even criticism on racial or ethnic matters.

The biggest single issue which transcends all others is that a few people (1%?) possess virtually everything and control virtually everything and are so greedy they want more.

Q9: How should they be addressed?

Although I was extremely pro management/anti-union as an undergrad, I believe the US needs to reinvigorate the union movement, i.e., someone who speaks for labor. I believe Copland's "Fanfare for the Common Man" spoke volumes for the time it was written and is inconceivable in 2015. The US needs to move back towards that paradigm. Labor needs to be valued as highly as capital.

PAGE 13: Our Civil Rights Experience: The Dream, at FiftyQ15: As an individual, what can you do to advance Dr. King's Dream today?

I attended the memorial service in Central Park (NYC) the Sunday after MLK was assassinated. Can't remember any of the speakers, but at the end we all linked arms and sang "We Shall Overcome", one of the most moving experiences of my life.

The "shovel in the face" reality almost 50 years later is that we overcame nothing! Very little in the US has changed for the better.

Improving access and opportunities for under served members of the population. Restoring belief that opportunities do exist for all groups of people. Educating people that with opportunity comes responsibility for personal accountability.

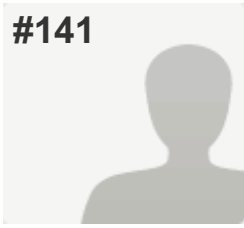

Q9: How should they be addressed?

Parental choice in public education. Improving educational system to prepare young people for a wider variety of career options than traditional 4-year college track. Emphasizing importance of "community" to supplement the work of the family unit. Less emphasis on the role of the Federal government, other than to provide safety nets for those most in need.

Destruction of the family and consequential loss of key personal values which necessary for a healthy society.

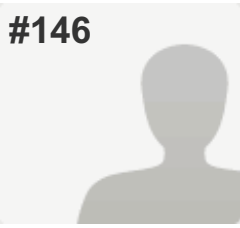

Q9: How should they be addressed?

Political correctness is a disaster. Much more emphasis is needed on personal accountability and productivity. Government programs, i.e, the war on poverty, has been a failure because dependence on government programs stifles personal initiative.

PAGE 13: Our Civil Rights Experience: The Dream, at FiftyQ15: As an individual, what can you do to advance Dr. King's Dream today?

Support family values, good education, value individual initiative, and religious values; eliminate political correctness, affirmative action, and social programs which encourage dependency. Institute term limits and require that members of congress adhere to the same requirements placed upon their constituents.
